If you receive SSDI/SSI benefits from Social Security and are working or looking for work, you should meet with a Community Work Incentive Coordinator (CWIC). CWICs are authorized to serve all SSA beneficiaries with disabilities, including transition-to-work aged youth, providing benefits planning and assistance services so that you will be better equipped to make informed choices about work. A CWIC will provide work incentives planning and assistance; help you and your family determine eligibility for Federal or State work incentives programs; provide general information about health benefits coverage available once you enter the workforce; and inform you of further protection and advocacy services available.

jwu@mayinstitute.org

May Institute offers a comprehensive set of educational and behavioral services to children and their families, private agencies, and public schools. Working closely with the families we serve, our behavior specialists use developmentally appropriate practices based on applied behavior analysis (ABA), the methodology universally recognized as critical for teaching children with a diagnosis of autism spectrum disorder (ASD) or other behavioral or developmental disabilities. We are currently providing services in the home and the community.

The “SOS for Parents” training empowers parents/caregivers to redirect and potentially eliminate challenging and oppositional behavior presented by children and adolescents with whom they interact. By using an empowerment model and a positive feedback loop adults learn how to create and sustain an environment in which children are influenced to align with requests and directives. Participants learn the nine Pillars of the program and accompanying interventions leading to positive change. Derived from key principles of Piaget, Maslow, Skinner, Cognitive Behavioral Therapy and Solution Focused Therapy, the “SOS for Parents” program is an invaluable tool for those who interact with children.
